Rationale for Course Proposal We are recommending the change because the summer semester is shortened compared to fall and spring and we do not increase the class meeting times/length of time. The curriculum covered is equally abbreviated half the material covered compared to a 16-week semester. We can cover the core training indicated in the course description during the time provided and provide adequate coverage of content

Joint Degree application for M.A. and M.U.P

This interdisciplinary program combines in three years the degrees of MA in geography and Master of Urban Planning. Details, including degree requirements, are available in a separate booklet either online or from either of the two departments. Entering students should submit separate applications to each department. The joint degree entails 61 credit hours of coursework (39 in planning, 22 in geography) including a thesis.

Urban Planning and Geography have a long history of interaction and connection. Responsible planning in urban communities requires an understanding of the human and physical geographies of these communities, and contemporary planning practice demands familiarity with advanced geographic techniques and information systems. Conversely, expertise in geography—and particularly concentration in urban geography—may require an understanding of and competence to deal with the planning dynamics of urban communities.

The objective of this program is to meet the needs of both Urban Planning and Geography for interdisciplinary knowledge by offering a dual degree program for the graduate student who intends to engage professionally in both planning and geography. The program combines in three years the normal two year Master of Urban Planning (48 credit hours) and the normal two year Master of Arts (MA) degree in Geography (30 credit hours) offered by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

Handbook for Graduate Students

Detailed information on departmental regulations is included in Policies for Graduate Study in Geography at the University of Kansas, available on the department's website.

Rationale for proposal

To make the degree more accessible to a wider group of students by eliminating the previous requirements of one course per discipline. We added one "Techniques/Methods" requirement, but otherwise, students have greater flexibility, provided a minimum number of courses in GEOG, and sufficient number of >700-level courses.

Program Description

Degree Requirements

M.A. Degree Requirements

The M.A. degree in museum studies requires 36 credit hours at the graduate level. Students in the Museum Studies program will complete the following:

3. Museum Conceptual Domains - 6 credit hours
4. Electives - 9 credit hours
5. Museum Experience (Internship) - 3 credit hours

1. Museum Studies Core (9 credit hours)

The Museum Studies Core ensures that all Museum Studies students gain a comprehensive understanding of the theories, history, techniques, and problems common to museums, historical agencies and related institutions. The Capstone course, taken in a student's third semester of study, provides an avenue for students to conduct research or other creative activities that advance the discipline of museum studies.

Students will develop expertise in one of the principal specialties of museum work by completing at least two courses in that area, at least one of which must be a Museum Studies (MUSE) course. Many courses in other departments could fulfill requirements; it is the responsibility of students, and their advisors, to ensure that individual courses meet program requirements based on the general relevance of the course and assurance that the student's work in the class will be applicable to museum studies by meeting with instructors and examining syllabi. Courses taken must be at the 500 level or above. The following lists include examples of courses that may fulfill the professional areas requirement.

3. Courses focusing on Museum Conceptual Domains (6 credit hours)

The conceptual domains of museum work address in depth the conceptual and theoretical foundations of museums. Courses that emphasize conceptual domains will place museological subjects in broader historical and intellectual frameworks. Students may take courses which may be offered in one or several disciplines. Courses will be selected based on the general relevance of the course, and assurance that the student's work in the class will be applicable to museum studies. Please see Museum Studies website for examples of possible courses.

4. Electives and Other Museum Studies Courses (9 credit hours)

Students are expected to deepen their knowledge of the field by taking courses in a subject area pertinent to their area of specialization. Courses will be selected with the approval of the student's committee chair, as well as the course instructor.

5. Museum Experience (3 credit hours)

While enrolled in the Museum Studies program, students are required to gain at least 500 hours of museum experience, of which at least 250 hours must be in an approved, professionally supervised internship MUSE 799 Museum Internship

6. Final Product and Examination

Each student will be responsible for a final product, developed through research or other creative activity, that contributes to museum studies and demonstrates the student's ability to engage conceptually and professionally with the discipline of museum studies.

Program Description

Degree Requirements

Certificate Requirements

The Indigenous Studies Graduate Certificate requires 12 hours of coursework:

- ISP 800: Indigenous Issues in the United States (3 hrs)
- ~~9 hours of graduate-level coursework with 50% or more content in Indigenous Peoples; courses must be approved by the ISP Executive Committee.~~ 9 hours ~~A list of graduate-level coursework with content relevant to approved courses may be found on the~~ field of Indigenous Studies taken from the list of approved courses, which can be found on the Indigenous Studies website.

Rationale for proposal

The ISP Executive Committee voted to revoke the privilege of certificate students to propose courses to count toward their certificate to provide more consistency in administration and overall program content. Students must now select courses from only the approved list of courses--which is still an extensive, interdisciplinary list.
