Transcript Title	Feminist Pedagogy Topics in Feminist Pedagogy:
Effective Term	Spring 2021

Catalog Description The goal of the course is to teach students to teach. By reading core texts of feminist pedagogy, understanding critical theories, and attending seminars at the Center for Teaching Excellence selected by instructor and student, students will learn how to present knowledge and stimulate learning in the classroom, as well as such practical skills as leading discussion sections, preparing and presenting class sessions, developing syllabi, devising fair grading and helpful advising, and solving pedagogical problems like maintaining civility in the classroom and coping with academic misconduct. ~~Must be repeated twice for a total of 1 credit hour while actively teaching.~~

Prerequisites Must be Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies graduate students.

Describe how:

This is already a required course for WGSS PhD students. This change will affect the number of credit hours (1.5 credit hours once instead of 0.5 credit hours twice) students will take, but the course requirement itself isn't new.

Rationale for Course Proposal WGSS is restructuring WGSS 803 and WGSS 804 to work more effectively together for both students and faculty. Both courses are being changed to 1.5 credit hours, and students will typically take them concurrently for a total of 3 credit hours. The same faculty member will instruct both courses in a given semester, which will take the place of one 3 credit hour course in their course load.

Effective Term Spring 2021 ~~Fall 2016~~

Catalog Description

The goal of this course is to train students in the skills essential to becoming effective scholars and educators, and successful members of the profession. The material to be covered by these three iterations includes 1) the ethics and practice of feminist research (e.g., protection of human subjects, conflicts of interest, confidentiality, legal strictures); 2) the practical aspects of producing knowledge (e.g., writing research papers, proper citation methods, conference presenting, responding to peer reviews); and 3) acquiring and securing a place in the work force (e.g., CV preparation, job interviews, grant writing, getting promotion [and, in the academy, tenure]).

Prerequisites Must be Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies graduate students.
